

Lochlin Blair

Director of Operations

Lochlin Blair brings 20 years of technology and management experience to his role as Director of Operations. He oversees the Professional Services and Technical Support teams ensuring service quality and excellence. His vital role requires him to take full accountability for implementation and management of all technology architectures supported by End to End Networks.

Prior to being appointed to Director, Lochlin was responsible for managing End to End Networks' National Support Centre. In this role, he re-built the operational structure, developing procedures that are easily adaptable to constant technology evolutions. Finding trained, certified, and talented professionals to sustain and exceed market growth has been key to the success of his department and the company.

Lochlin takes pride in making certain that all internal standards conform to ITIL (Information Technology Infrastructure Library). Throughout the years, he has acquired a reputation of being an expert in the area of Operations and ran a peer group through the YTA (York Technology Association) to help others learn how to effectively deliver best practices.

Prior to joining End to End Networks, Lochlin owned his own company servicing industrial companies for 10 years and has a background in Electrical Engineering.
